LA POSTA VECCHIA

Andrea Barcia is the new Head Chef at La Posta Vecchia Hotel

Rome, March 31, 2025 – La Posta Vecchia Hotel is delighted to welcome Andrea Barcia as the new Head Chef. Born in Trentino, his culinary journey has taken him across Italy and abroad — to England, Australia, Switzerland, and Denmark — before returning to Italy.

He began his career with a formative experience in the kitchen of our renowned sister hotel, Il Pellicano, in 2011, before taking his talents abroad where he worked with prestigious establishments such as The Pescatarian in Copenhagen, Kulm Country Club at the Kulm Hotel in St. Moritz, Helene Darroze at The Connaught in London, and Cecconi's Flinders Lane in Melbourne. Returning to Italy, he worked in Val Gardena at the Suinsom restaurant of Hotel Tyrol, and most recently at Passaggio by Capanna at the Capanna Suite in Montalcino.

Throughout his journey, Andrea has continuously expanded his culinary vision, built a diverse repertoire of ingredients, and deepened his knowledge of regional cuisines. With a focus on tradition Andrea Barcia will showcase the authentic tastes of Palo Laziale and Alto Lazio, offering guests a truly memorable gastronomic experience.

La Posta Vecchia Hotel

A magical hidden gem on the coast of Palo Laziale, this chic boutique hotel by the sea boasts 21 fabulous rooms, a celebrated restaurant, an indoor heated swimming pool, the LPV Health & Beauty Club, and on-site private museum and 5 hectares of lush gardens. The villa, which dates back to 1640, was built by the Orsini Princes and later sold to the Odescalchi family, who own the adjacent Castello. In 1960, La Posta Vecchia was purchased by Jean Paul Getty, who had the residence restored and filled with Italian treasures curated by art historian Federico Zeri. The current owner, Roberto Sciò, bought the villa directly from Getty in the 1980s, and in 1990 it opened its doors as the perfect getaway from Rome – only a 40-minutes' drive away – and the epitome of lavish and eclectic Italian hospitality.
